

Digital Footprint

By Jennie.C

How might your digital footprint affect your future opportunities?

Every things that you post on social media might affect your own future opportunities. For example, if you have posted that you are drinking alcohol, or doing something crazy (pranking someone else just for fun, etc), the people working at the university or college might think you are a party animal and very crazy person, even if you are not. They all will check your digital footprints to see if you have a qualification to join their school, because they don't want people with very bad grades in their school. If you have not posted anything, or posted things that shows the good sides of you (ex. Cooking, reading book, working hard, etc), they might think that you work very hard and have very nice personalities, they will pass you.

How can you keep your digital footprint appropriate and safe?

- Avoid negative publicity.
- Create the password very strong, but memorable.
- Do not overexpose yourself.
- Think before you do

What informations did I learned?

I learned that many people are leaving lots of digital footprint without noticing that they actually do. For example, writing personal informations for delivering things on online. Also, I think that even we are trying to not leave the digital footprint, there should be something that we have leaved the footprint somewhere. But we should still try not to leave any digital footprint. I think the most important way to keep your digital footprint appropriate and safe is don't share any of your personal informations on online, and think before you do (post, share informations, etc) because everything you post or saying things on online are permanent, even if you delete it.
