Ty's View:

Ty Johnson said "He didn't see it coming." Once Ty was hit with a metallic cold bullet bursting threw his body, he sprinted into the Laundromat and fell to the floor. Bullets still being fired as the glass was shattering, and people screaming. "I remember I was on may knees, blood all over the white tile floor. Trying to catch my breath I looked up to make sure they were gone. Then I passes out." Ty said that was about all he could remember about that scaring event, until waking up in the hospital.

Other's View:

I took the time to talk to Ms. Lee, the owner of the Laundromat that was there the night of the shooting. "I have never witnessed anything like that in my life. I will never forget that!" Ms. Lee powerfully delivered that line and with passion. She tried very hard to hold in tears and follow through with the interview. However, this task of talking about it was very hard for her so we ended early. I am pleased to here Ms. Lee is now with a councillor and working

Young Hustler Shot in Brooklyn.

The Story:

Just out side a Chinese Laundromat a young man named Ty Johnson was on his way back from a workout at the gym near by, after he went to a Dominican restaurant and ordered a dinner which Ty stated that he "Only ate 5 minutes top." Ty was walking towards Flatbush a smaller town in Brooklyn when a car passing oddly slow started shooting at him. "Shots were cutting through the air above me", this was a quote from Ty when I interviewed him in the hospital, after the shooting. Ty said his "..body went into overdrive."

My View on the Shooting.

Ty was a very intelligent young man who did not deserve what he got in my opinion, now I am certainly not for drugs, drug use, drug dealing or anything like that but he seemed like a great guy. I get that there are and always will be rivals and opposite people but enough with all the violence, if you don't care or don't like them, then leave them alone! Ty does not need this in his life or deserve it, nobody does. Now, I am a sap for love so when Ty was talking about his relationship with a young lady, Alyse, it melted my heart. Ty did not want this topic in this write up, yet let me use this line; "Alyse, if you read this, I'm sorry, I'm so, so sorry my boo."

My Time Reading Street Pharm.

I really enjoyed this book, I normally don't enjoy reading however, this book I did. I believe because it was full of excitement, suspense and love. Three things I enjoy in movies so why not books? Street Pharm was inspiring as Ty came above the drug dealing and came clean and a better individual over all.
