#Creativethinking, #Communication

Thinking of new ideas can be simple in the right environment. For me, that environment is with a team that is very communicative. An accepting team is also very important for me as it allows me to give out my opinions judgment free. It is okay to disagree with one and another, as long as it's respectful. Being communicative is very important because it allows the team to think of the best ideas; as one. We know the issues and goals if we communicate in order to find out. This is the best environment for me to formulate idea's in.

Another great benefit of communication is that the amount of people in a team add on to each other's idea's based on their experience. For instance, if I were to come up with an idea to improve the boat, my team members would acknowledge the idea and instead of disregarding it, alter it based on their perspective. This way I can receive the altered idea and alter it once more, back and forth; a sort of filtration system. By doing this, my idea can be significantly improved and force me to think deeper because of the criticisms I received that I didn't think of prior to the brainstorm.
